I have recently re read Arthur C Clarke's book Profiles of the Future, after learning that Clarke had slightly changed the book after its first release in 1962. I had forgotten how excellent the book is, particularly Chapter 18, The Obsolescence of Man. Clarke admired hovercraft more than he should, but apart from that his ideas for the future were generally accurate.

While the above predictions are all well and good, it's worth it to take a look at Arthur C. Clarke 's own track record before we begin to giggle with glee the Universal Replicator and Quantum Generators. The following is a list of predictions made by him in his 1963 book Profiles of the Future. A similar chart appears in the back summarizing his beliefs in the events of the future.

Profiles Of The Future. Arthur C. Clarke. This book originally appeared in 1962, and was based on essays written during the period 1959 - 1961. Since it was concerned with ultimate possibilities, and not with achievements to be expected in the near future, even the remarkable events of the last decade have dated it very little.
