The Stranger Final Reflection. One of the main themes in Albert Camus's The Stranger is that the universe is irrational and life has no meaning. Camus's writing strongly supports the idea that a person's life is meaningless and has no structure or real order. Over the course of the novel, the main character Meursault exhibits odd behavior in comparison to that of the other "normal" characters Camus introduces.

Existentialism is rightly seen in Albert Camus' novel The Stranger. Meursault, a Frenchman who lives in Algiers (a pied-noir). The novel is famous for its first lines: "Mother died today. Or maybe it was yesterday, I don't know." They capture Meursault's anomie briefly and brilliantly. After this introduction, the reader follows Meursault through the novel's first-person narration to Marengo, where he sits vigil at the place of his mother's death.
